My nieces and nephews know that figures tell the truth when the figures deal with the results of systematic savings through the Payroll Savings Plan. Take a look at this chart. Circle the figure you need to achieve some goal for yourself or your family. Then move over to the column which tells you how much you need to save each week in U. S. Savings Bonds to attain your objective. The whole thing is as simple as adding one to three, because your Uncle Sam pays you an extra dollar for every $3 you put in Series E Savings Bonds when you hold the Bonds to maturity 10 years hence.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which may relieve this type of pain. Made from the crump-like spray and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion, help relieve nervousness for the "blues" to come.

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

HOW CALF LOSSES CAN BE AVOIDED

American farmers are losing many more calves than they need to. At last, today's annual total of calf deaths could be reduced sharply if every owner would follow a few established principles of breeding, management, feeding and sanitation.

Vitamin A deficiency may cause calf scours.

On the breeding side of the picture, the first step is to make sure of parent stock that is vigorous and disease-free. Bang's disease levies a heavy toll on our calf crop, and all breeding stock should be brucellosis-tested.

After sound breeding, the next step is proper nutrition for the cow. She needs abundant, balanced rations to produce a healthy calf...and such rations must include good legume hay and adequate Vitamin A.

At the time the calf is born, cleanliness and sanitation are important in giving it the right start. The maternity stall should be clean, well-ventilated, dry, and adequately bedded.

After this, common calfhood diseases such as scours and pneumonia are among the chief threats. White scours is one of the worst hazards. This disease generally attacks calves less than five days old, and is caused by a germ commonly found in many farm buildings. The best preventive, therefore, is to be sure that barns and lots are clean and sanitary. If scours develop, prompt veterinary care is essential if the animal is to be saved. The calf should be isolated and its quarters disinfected, to protect other calves.

Pneumonia is another important cause of calf losses. This may be caused by infection, parasites, or chilling. Clean, dry, properly ventilated quarters are very helpful in preventing it. Treatment with some of the newer drugs is producing excellent results in some calf pneumonia cases, veterinarians report. This disease, however, may offer many complications, and the exact measures to be used depend on the type, and the local circumstances.

Prevention...sanitation and care, are the best ways to guard against calf losses. They are easy, if the owner will just take the pains to observe them.

Japs Get Ideas From Cartoons

Learn Their Rights, Power Of Voting From Simple, Colored Posters.

TOKYO.—Baffled by the Japanese people's inability to comprehend that their votes now will run a country once throttled by royalty, warmakers and industrial barons, General MacArthur's government experts are trying to explain it with cartoons. Allied artists have cut Emperor Hirohito down to a new size, exploited women's rights, wiped out the men who whispered advice from behind the throne and plunked the factory owner down at the bargaining table with his workers.

These colored posters—as simple as a child's picture book—will be displayed throughout the four big home islands in an effort to explain to the people that from now on it is their duty to take advantage of all the rights democracy and a new constitution have brought them.

Americans charged with reshaping Japan's government wipe fevered brows and hope the people will understand what it is all about.

They hope that at least the basic ideas will sink in so the nation's 70-odd millions will know their rights and duties under the new constitution.

Cartoons Click.

At a press conference, Japanese newsmen listened dully as the constitution, fair elections and political systems were explained. But when the cartoons were trotted out they came to life and chuckled and giggled appreciatively as their rights were explained in picture. That gave hope it would be the same everywhere in the country.

A good example of the cartoons, all of which are of the "before" and "after" type, is one showing the relation of the emperor, the nobility, and a man and a woman who constitute "the people."

In the "before" cartoon the emperor was a large figure on a big wooden pedestal. The nobility was a bit smaller and on a smaller block. Still more shrunken was the man on a tiny pedestal. The woman was a tiny figure on no pedestal at all.

The "after" cartoon shows a truck hauling away the pedestals and all figures, even the woman, are the same size. Incidentally, the man and the woman are smiling—but not the emperor and the nobility. They look sort of glum.

Accounting Required.

Another shows how the emperor, ministers and elder statesmen made the laws and controlled the people at the bottom of the heap.

"After" depicts the people electing the diet, which makes laws to control the emperor and the ministers who govern "for" the people.

The big figure of the industrialist towering over the ant-like figures working in his factories changes to an owner sitting down to bargain with the workers. Depositors whose taxes were shown running down a chute into the hands of militarists who never accounted for them are shown under the "new order." Now their payments go into channels where strict accounting is necessary.

The Japanese newsmen laughed heartily at a cartoon which, first, showed one policeman holding a citizen while another policeman searched his home. The "after" showed the same policeman appearing before a judge asking for a required warrant for search.

The newsmen roared when a government section spokesman remarked drily: "They used to push people around—now they're just directing traffic."

'Matchbox' Camera Helped Allies Behind Foe Lines

ROCHESTER, N. Y. — A tiny "matchbox" camera which would fit in a man's hand, and a "vest-pocket darkroom" aided Allied agents to snap photographs behind enemy lines during World War II, Eastman Kodak company report.

One thousand of the cameras were produced for the Office of Strategic Services and underground forces in enemy-held territory.

Designed at request of OSS, the cameras were made to resemble a box of safety matches—from which they got their name. The half-inch square pictures could be enlarged many times.

The miniature "darkroom" with its chemicals in pill form enabled an agent to develop film in a small glass with a single jigger of solution.

On a film two feet in length the camera made 30 exposures. The angle of the lens permitted photographs to be shot "from the hip."

Girl Balks at Hair Nets; Denied Unemployed Benefits

HARRISBURG, PA.—A waitress who claimed a hair net detracted from her appearance is not entitled to unemployment compensation in Pennsylvania.

The unemployment compensation board of review upheld a referee's decision refusing jobless benefits to Helen D. Katishen, Smithmill, Pa. The proprietor of the restaurant where Miss Katishen worked furnished hair nets to all waitresses "because of previous complaints by customers who had found hair in the food."

INSURANCE is different from most of the things you buy because you must buy insurance BEFORE - not WHEN YOU NEED IT. When the need comes you will know exactly what you should HAVE HAD. However, it's TOO LATE then to do anything about it. Whether what you should have had is what you have when the loss occurs, depends largely on the knowledge and experience of the agency that plans your insurance program. If that is the best available, you can DEPEND on your insurance to do what YOU WANT and expect it to do.

Our years of successful experience might be helpful to you.
